With more than two decades of transformation and outsourcing experience working as both a buyer and provider, I understand the complex market dynamics and changing business challenges organizations face today and have the experience our clients need to flourish.

Currently, I lead the Energy Transition Market Unit for North America responsible for global delivery and client relationships. During my 20 years at Capgemini, I've led transformation programs for Fortune 500 clients across the Americas and led multiple sector market units, including Business Services. My passion is to work closely with clients to be impactful by aligning organizational strategies, driving business process standards, technology automation initiatives, and ultimately delivering accelerated and sustainable business value.

Prior to joining Capgemini, I held senior leadership roles in IT operations and architecture planning with major companies such as TXU, AT&T, and Sprint. Within these roles I was responsible for technology architecture and strategy, IT production operations, and the development and maintenance of applications.

In my spare time, I love spending time with my family and enjoying my garden and greenhouse.
